The grim reaper death has again thrust in his sickle and taken from us one we loved most dearly. On Jan. 15th 1903 Mr. W. D. Scott departed this life. He had been in bad health for several years and for nine weeks had suffered intensely. He was sixty-eight years old and had for twenty-five years been a resident of this Co. He was a member of the age of fifteen, united with the Baptist church, and was a strong believer in the faith. He leaves a wife two sons and one daughter to mourn the loss. He knew he could never get well and was willing and ready to pay the debt we must all pay sooner or later. He attended to his business affairs himself and told his family just what he wanted them to do. Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Hebron church by Rev. W. D. Moore of Ripleyville Ky, a car which the body was laid to rest in Mt Hebron Cemetery.

Charlie Gentry and family are planning to move to Illinois in a short time. There are already three vacant houses in our town.

Some of our farmers have been gathering corn during the past few days while the ground is frozen hard. Several are not yet through.

Frank Taylor and family, who have lived at the Soper place during the past year have decided to move this year—much to the regret of their near neighbors—but do not know yet where they will locate.

The following, although not original with us will perhaps be none the less interesting for that: Take the number of your living brothers, double the amount, add to it 3 multiply the result by 5, add to it the number of living sisters, multiply the result by 10, add to the product the entire number of deaths and subtract 150 from the result. The right hand figure will be the number of deaths, the middle figure the number of living sisters, and the left, if any, the number of living brothers.

"Everyone knows there is as much liquor sold in Lancaster as there would be if we had licensed saloons," is common cry. Well, suppose there is, a fellow has to get it on the sly, and you can bet your life he's going to drink it on the sly. If his copper gets too hot he tries to hide, but if the people say by their votes that it's right to sell him the whisky, why should he want to hide the jag he has on?

NEW PAVING MATERIAL.

Authorities of a New York Town Utilize Bituminous Macadam with Gratifying Success.

One of the problems confronting municipal authorities is the question that occupies a considerable part of the public mind. In New York asphalt has had the preference of late years, but it has so many disadvantages in wet weather and in winter that the advent of another and better pavement is joyfully hailed. In the lower part of Yonkers, at Park Hill station, there has just been laid the first sample of bituminous macadam pavement around New York.

A representative of the New York Tribune paid a visit to Park Hill the other day, and this is what he saw: For about two city blocks the bituminous pavement has been laid. The grade of the streets ranges from six to 12 per cent, none of it level. Of course, there has been no chance to tell what the result will be. In other cities and towns throughout the country, however, it has stood the severe tests of heavy traffic and extreme temperature changes.

The foundation for this roadway was constructed on the same principle as that of a macadam road; that is, broken stone of assorted sizes, spread over a carefully prepared and graded subgrade, and rolled with a heavy road roller. After this broken stone had been thoroughly compressed and kneaded together in this manner, it was covered with a thin bituminous compound, which is sufficiently liquid to adhere to the stone and prepare it for the reception of a thicker bituminous cement, which was then placed upon it in a sufficiently thick coat to cover the entire surface.

On the foundation thus prepared was placed the wearing surface, composed of all sizes of selected stones, varying from 1 1/2 inches in its largest dimension to an impalpable powder, so regulated as to fill every void or interstice. This graded stone is mechanically mixed with a sufficient quantity of bituminous cement to thoroughly coat every particle of it, so that no unit of the mineral ingredient remains without a suitable coat of bituminous paint or cement.

This was then spread and raked hot on the street, about 2 1/2 inches thick, the heat of this mixture being sufficiently great to melt the bituminous cement on the foundation and thoroughly unite the whole pavement into a homogeneous mass. This was then rolled and compressed until thoroughly solid. During this rolling the upper surface was thoroughly covered with a thin coating of very adhesive, quick-drying bituminous cement, which filled any irregularity or crevice in the surface of the roadway.

On this surface was sprinkled hot stone, graded in size from one-half to one-quarter of an inch, and thoroughly rolled until it is united with the mass. This gives an absolutely non-slippery surface, presenting to the eye the same smooth top as a well-finished macadam road, but having the inherent advantage over a macadam roadway of being absolutely united from top to bottom.

Weather and traffic conditions are unable to ravel out or break up the surface thus united with the bituminous cement.

Owing to the gritty nature of the surface, slipping of horses or the wheels of rapidly driven automobiles is rendered impossible. Because of the fact that the bituminous cement used in the composition of this mixture is absolutely indestructible in water, there can be no entry of this element, which is so destructive to the life of other pavements. There is, then, a union of all the good qualities of a monolithic pavement without the disadvantages and bad features—a smooth surface, unaffected by water and absolutely non-slippery.

STRONG LIFTING FRAME.

Handy Little Contrivance Which Will Be Found Especially Useful on Butchering Day.

From the accompanying cut you will be able to get an idea of a handy arrangement for lifting, especially so on butchering day. The side pieces of the frame are made of 2x4x

14; the legs are 2x4x12, and the roll (A) is a round block of wood 13 inches long with two two-inch holes to insert the lever (B). C is a stick between the lever and frame when the load is drawn up; D is a three-quarter-inch rope and E is a single block. The legs should be attached by a bolt running through the frame, and the holes in the legs be made oblong in shape so they will fit over a wagon. The bolt must be at least four inches longer than the frame is wide.—R. E. Clark, in Epitomist.

An Indication of Success.

Not long ago a business man received a letter from a farmer. The paper used had a neat heading, showing the name of the farm and the address of the proprietor. The business man's conclusion was this: "That man is a good farmer. He is working with a purpose in view. He is not farming for his health particularly. He means to win and win he will." Of course, naming the farm will not bring success any more than buying thoroughbred stock will; but they are good symptoms. They prove that the man is on the right track.—Farm Journal.

Country Newspaper.

Many men have attempted to immortalize themselves by truthfully characterizing the country newspaper. The late lamented Bill Nye essayed it. He said the country newspaper is a library, an encyclopedia, a poem, a biography, a history, a prophecy, a directory, a time table, a romance, a cook book, a guide, a horoscope, an art critic, a political resume, a ground plan of the universe, a sermon, a song, a circus an obituary, a picnic, a shipwreck, a symphony in solid brevity, a melody of life and death, a grand aggregation of man's glory and his shame—in short, a birdseye view of all the goodness and meanness, the joys and griefs, the birth and deaths, the pride and poverty of a community, to say nothing of its being a long felt want, a seven column paper in a five column town, a lying sheet, a feeble effort, a financial problem, a tottering wreck, a political tool, a sheriff's sale, a lining for carpets and a cover for the pantry shelves—all at a dollar a year in advance, wood and potatoes taken on subscriptions.
